

CALL FOR APPLICATION

Organised by the Antall József Knowledge Centre, the Antall József Summer School is a two-week educational programme focusing on the most pivotal cooperation of the Central European region, the Visegrad Cooperation.

The Summer School in 2018 will examine the Visegrad Cooperation and its regional environment from a variety of perspectives with the help of scholars and internationally-acknowledged senior experts.

To highlight NATO priority topics, AJSS will bring together a range of experts on security policies, enabling them to offer an insight into and discuss not only the future of the Euro-Atlantic Cooperation in general, but also the V4's role in it. The discussions will focus on questions such as the most important current security threats, cyber-security, possibilities of defence cooperation, and the biggest challenges of border control.

Although AJSS is mainly about the Central European region, we put great emphasis on our wider neighbourhood as well. The current trends in the V4's foreign relations and the shifting regional cooperation are of particular importance. During the two weeks of the Summer School, the most significant issues affecting the Western Balkan and Eastern Partnership countries will be discussed.

 Place and Time of AJSS:
Budapest, 2-13 July 2018

Eligibility

MA and PhD students, graduated researchers, young experts, early-career professionals of international relations, political science, security studies, economics, and related social sciences, aged 23-35, primarily from the V4 countries, the Western Balkans and Eastern Partnership countries.

Eligible countries

Applications from any other country not listed above are also welcome, however, they are not eligible for a full scholarship.
